GOING TO BE MARRIED.

Her whole rich sum of happiness is there!
Crowly.

FROM THE PHANTASMAGORIA.

Accompany me (in imagination,) dear reader, with a bride and bride's maid-elect, a mamma and a milliner, into a boudoir filled with all the elegant little incidents to wedding preparations. Fancy yourself in a corner: the only spot unoccupied by packets of bride cake and bridal finery; give attentive eye and ear to all that passes, and probably we may be better informed as to the meaning and importance of the phrase—"Going to be married." The bride elect is a pretty little simpering girl of eighteen; one, to whom thought never occasioned a headache, until it became necessary to 'decide' on the colour of the wedding pelisse. She is folding up a letter, which, from its innumerable scores, and blots, and flourishes, to say nothing of its countless dearests and farewells, can only be on one subject—love.

The milliner, great in her vocation at all times, is, just now, of infinitely more importance than the lover himself; she is displaying the lavender lutestring pelisse—which as yet exhibits—

The glory and freshness of a dream!

The bride's maid elect, is in age, prettiness, and folly, a very ditto to the bride; joyfully does she regard the cake and finery which surround her; henceforth and forever, she associates love with silk and sugar, and if those sparkling eyes do not 'bear false witnesses,' it will not be her fault, if in two months she does not herself require those services which it is now her office to pay to another. The lady mother alone looks serious, and with reason too. Does not all the eclat of the bridal depend upon her exertions? The happiness or misery of the married life is secondary, or at least an afterthought; but mercy upon us! if the wedding day should not go off well! should the dejune be ill arranged, or the fine part of the company send back-word, or the weather be wet, or the bride look ill, or the bride's maid look too well! Surely the dread of any one of these trials sufficiently accounts for the cloud upon her brow.

Having thus introduced the dramatis personæ, they shall now be heard in their own cause.

'Was ever any thing so unfortunate!' said the bride elect, in a tone of elegant distress; 'George will be here to-day, and I have not made up my mind where I should like to go. It is a great plague this being married. I know I shall never get my clothes packed in time.'

'Don't be a fool, child,' replied mamma, 'but be thankful you have the opportunity of being so plagued. Just look round the circle of your acquaintance, and see how many scores of girls would be glad to establish themselves in any way, much more as you have done; a good house, fine furniture, a wardrobe fit for a duchess, liberty to have as much company as you choose, servants at your command, and, I make no doubt, a most excellent husband; for I am sure, whatever people may say of his temper, Mr. —— has the best of hearts. Show Mrs. Mac Scallop that set of pearl ornaments he sent you last week, and ask her whether you ought not to be thankful to Providence with such prospects of happiness?'

'La Mamma, I know all that,' said the young lady, as she displayed the costly baubles with affected indifference and ill concealed triumph. 'I know all that well enough, but still it is exceedingly tiresome not to know whether to go to London or Cheltenham or the Lakes. I wish two or three of my friends would just drop in—to help me to decide,' she said; to look at my fine things—she thought.

'And, as I live,' said the lady mother, running to the window at the sound of a double rap, 'here comes a party of the Johnsons and Dickensons—spiteful vulgar creatures—how lucky! Mary Anne you look perished,—throw the cashmere over your shoulders.—Mac Scallop, do arrange those dresses so that we may have a good view of them,—Sophia, fetch me this dear child's trinket case, I have just now leisure to pack up her jewels.'

By the time these arrangements without a motive were made, three of the six single Miss Johnsons, and two of the five disengaged Miss Dickenses entered—and greeting truly feminine ensued.

'My dear Charlotte, my dear Agnes; Elizabeth, Lucy; Louisa; now this is so kind; so truly friendly; and just come in as we were wishing for you; ah, one knows the value of friends when one is about to leave them,' &c.

This from the bridal party.

'Dear girl, we could not rest without coming to see you once more, you looked so shockingly ill yesterday, and out of spirits; no wonder indeed, it is such an awful thing to be married; such a trial to leave home.'

This from the knot of spinsters.

The bride elect was evidently affected.

She looked down to blush, and she looked up to sigh
With a smile on her lips—

it was not the fault of her intentions, but she could not act the remainder of the line—and a tear in her eye:

however, she raised her handkerchief, and the semblance did as well.

'I hope you will be happy,' said the two eldest of the party in that affectionately plaintive tone, invariably used by spinsters of an un-certain age, when speaking of the marriage of younger and more fortunate rivals.

'Happy indeed!' echoed the younger fry, wistfully surveying the wedding apparel and trapher-nalia; 'who could be otherwise with all these beautiful things.'

'Beautiful, my dear! said the matron, with as much exultation as decency allowed her to manifest—'well I'm so glad you like them, you have all such good taste in dress, but really now they are quite plain and simple.'

'No bride ever left G— with such a complete wardrobe,' said Mrs. Mac Scallop, tossing her head, and unfolding at the same time a superb ball-dress.

'Why you know,' replied the matron, sighing very audibly, 'one would not have one's daughter disgrace the man she is going to marry, and such a man as Mr. ——, as generous as he is rich. Ah! my dear young friends, my warmest wish is that you may all meet just such another; be, indeed, with such a home and such parent as you are blessed with, I don't wonder you are in no haste to be married; however, we shall see one of these days, we shall have Miss Agnes, or Miss Louisa, ay, ay, I have heard something—'

'Oh! goodness, gracious, what? where? Well, I vow and declare; now, really, I assure you; and did I ever hear the like; what will people say next?' burst simultaneously from the lips of the delighted young ladies in question; who considered that to have been the subject of a wedding report was something; a step, at least, towards the attainment of bridal honors.

'Mamma,' said the bride-elect, with a languid air, 'you forget our friends have had a long walk.'

'Ah my poor head,' replied her mother, 'seeing after your trumpery will turn it; Sophia, these are such particular friends, they really must taste the cake before the wedding.'

Those of the 'particular friends' whom envy had not deprived of appetite, gratefully accepted the proffered refreshment; but the two eldest, and, if truth must be told, hopeless spinsters, declared bride-cake to be their 'particular aversion.'

At length, when there remained no article of finery unshown, no prospect of future grandeur unrevealed, no spiteful feeling unfelt, and no affectionate word unsaid, the spinster party retired; the younger branches, to sigh for the vulgar privileges of eating bride-cake and ordering their own dinners; the elder, to manufacture humble imitations of the bridal finery—to lament in every company that their poor dear friend should be so sacrificed; and to suppress all outward signs of extreme willingness to be so sacrificed themselves.

Released from the presence of their visitors, the bridal party resumed the original subject of discussion—the scene of the "Wedding Excursion."

The bride-elect had some floating ideas of love and poetry, moonlight walks, and the Regatta, and she therefore voted for the Lakes.—Mrs. McScallop inveighed vehemently against all 'countrified expeditions;' depicted with millinery rhetoric the certain ruin which would arise to pelisses and complexions, and enlarged on the absurdity of people going where they could not be seen. She voted for Cheltenham; and the bride's-maid very naturally 'followed on the same side,' rightly judging that Cheltenham would afford her better chance of making conquests.

But here I shall dismiss the subject. A wedding excursion is far too important a concern to be dispatched, or even introduced at the fag end of a paper. Some day or other I shall describe one in which I was once included (not as a principal) and then—but for the present I have sufficiently endangered my reputation with that class of readers, who consider it as heinous to remember as to invent, and who deem every production satirical, which is not exactly a sermon.

Gunpowder Pie.—During the examination at the Police Office, yesterday morning, Mr. Presser, Master Baker, living at the N. E. corner of Seventh and Lombard streets, brought before the Mayor, and exhibited a Pie, the lower stratum of which was composed of gunpowder, the filling of middle sized potatoes, the whole being neatly and tastefully covered, with a crust of wheat flour, so that in all respects it resembled a Peach Pie, made on a large tin patty pan; the foundation of wetted powder, was in immediate contact with the bottom of the tin, it was about half an inch thick, and may have weighed two pounds.

A little girl, whom the people about the bakehouse thought they could not recognize, brought the Pie on Sunday morning last, to be baked; it was put into the oven with a great number of pans and dishes, containing the Sunday dinners of the neighbourhood, and after being baked for an hour and a half, was drawn out, with the other dishes, but no person came to claim it, and it remained in the Bake House, until Tuesday night, when a mouse bored into it, and brought out a potatoe, thus disclosing a most diabolical plot, for the destruction of this poor man, his family and property—and which plot, had it succeeded, would have involved the whole neighbourhood in great danger—the powder crust had become completely stiff, but not entirely dry, the potatoes, about half baked, and the upper crust handsomely browned, and was altogether that kind of Pie, before it was broken, that would have made the mouth of a hungry man water.

A Lesson for Monarchs.—During his march to conquer the world, Alexander, the Macedonian, came to a people in Africa who dwelt in a remote and secluded corner, in peaceful huts, and knew neither war nor conqueror. They led him to the hut of their chief, who received him hospitably, and placed before him golden dates, golden figs, and bread of gold. 'Do you eat gold in this country?' said Alexander. 'I take it for granted, (replied the Chief,) that thou wert able to find eatables in thine own country. For what reason, then, art thou come amongst us?' 'Your gold has not tempted me hither,' said Alexander, 'but I would become acquainted with your manners and customs.' 'So be it,' rejoined the other; 'sojourn with us as long as it pleaseth thee.' At the close of this conversation, two citizens entered, as into their court of justice. The Plaintiff said, 'I bought of this man a piece of land, and as I was making a deep drain through it, I found a treasure. This is not mine: for I only bargained for the land, and not for any treasure that might be concealed beneath it; and yet the former owner of the land will not receive it.' The defendant answered, 'I hope I have a conscience, as well as my fellow citizen. I sold him the land, with all its contingent as well as existing advantages, and consequently the treasure inclusively.' The Chief, who was also their supreme Judge, recapitulated their words, in order that the parties might see whether or not he understood them aright. Then, after some reflection, he said, 'Thou hast a son, friend, I believe?' 'Yes.' 'And thou,' addressing the other, 'a daughter?' 'Yes.' 'Well, then, let thy son marry thy daughter, and bestow the treasure on the young couple, for a marriage portion.' Alexander seemed surprised and perplexed. 'Think you my sentence unjust?' the Chief asked him. 'Oh no,' replied Alexander; 'but it astonishes me.' 'And how, then,' rejoined the Chief, 'would the case have been decided in your country?' 'To confess the truth,' said Alexander, 'we should have taken both parties into custody, and have seized the treasure for the King's use.' 'For the King's use!' exclaimed the Chief; 'Does the sun shine on that country?' 'O yes.' 'Does it rain there?' 'Assuredly.' 'Wonderful! but are there tame animals in that country, that live on the grass and herbs?' 'Very many, and of many kinds.' 'Ay, that must then be the cause (said the Chief)—for the sake of those innocent animals, the all-gracious Being continues to let the sun shine and the rain drop down on your own country, since its inhabitants are unworthy of such blessings.'

Hurwitz's Hebrew Tales.

Useful Advice to sundry sorts of People.

1. When you are introduced to a stranger, be sure to ask and find out all his business, and pump as much out of him as you can; because questions are the very keys of knowledge.

2. If a secret be communicated to you, be very careful to keep it; and to make sure work of it, get two or three persons to help you.

3. If you are an unmarried man, and in love, take to writing verses; nothing sooner gives the patient relief under such circumstances.

4. If your mistress be cruel, make some verses, and ask her pardon on your knees, and kiss her hand through her glove.

5. When you have become tired of her, excuse yourself for leaving her by saying that her company is so good that a little answers your purpose.

6. If you are a married man, give short answers to your wife: for the least said is soonest mended.

7. If you are not fond of her, look as cross as you feel. Nothing charms like sincerity.

8. If you are fond of her, let the world know it by kissing her hand, talking tender to her, and looking sweet at her in company.

9. When your wife is in a passion, remember to fly into one yourself. The way to stop a fire in the woods or grass grounds is to kindle another to meet it—and thus extinguish the whole.

10. Spend your evenings at a tavern, and then your wife will be delighted to see you on your return, especially if you are a little boozy.

11. When you walk out with her, keep a few paces before, by way of eminence.

12. When you ride in a chaise with her, look well to your right, and talk principally to your horse—this will preserve family peace.

13. Tell her of her faults before folks; and then they can have the benefit of your advice as well as she.

14. Never praise her for her virtues, lest it should make her vain and assuming.

Gold Mine near Lynchburg.—We were last Monday, shown specimens of gold which have been lately picked up on the land of Col. Wm. I. Lewis, near Lynchburg, which was perfectly free from alloy. We understand it is quite common, particularly after heavy rains, to find it scattered over the soil. The largest piece ever found yielded little more than 5oz. of pure gold. It is intended to commence working the mine in the course of next year, and to continue it if it should promise to prove profitable.—Virginian.

Hooping Cough.—Somebody says a plaster of gum galbanum applied to the chest, cures this complaint.

From the Raleigh Register.

Geology of the State.—A peculiar assemblage of Rocks cross Dan river, in the county of Rockingham, which the Professor calls, for want of a term more generally understood, the Transition Formation of Rockingham and Stokes. On descending the hill from Rockingham Court-house to the Eagle Falls, the traveller is warned of a change in the Geological Structure of the Country, by the occurrence of water-worn Gravel, and of black Slaty Rocks, inclined to the horizon at a low angle and totally different from all the Rocks that lie eastward of this place.

This formation comes in from Virginia in the shape of a wedge, terminating in a point at Germanton, while the broader part extends along on the Virginia line between the river Mayo on the west, and the Dan on the east, ending in this direction, not far from the point where this river crosses the line. Indeed this formation and that of King's mountain, before mentioned (which belongs probably to a similar geological class) are both wedge-shaped, having their vertices just within the northern and southern lines of this state respectively, while they open into the two contiguous states. The eastern line of this formation, as it runs from the Virginia line to Germanton, takes a more westerly direction than our other rock formations, which generally extend from northeast to southwest. It is a further peculiarity of these rocks, that they are inclined to the horizon at a low angle, rarely exceeding 30 degrees, and usually not more than 20, and dip northwest, while the other strata of this country are almost perpendicular and dip northeast.

The hills afford excellent freestone of the finer kinds of sandstone and similar rocks, which are applicable to the various purposes enumerated as belonging to sandstone in Part I. of this Report. From a hill at Valley Fields, the residence of Mr. Galloway, may be obtained a dark and fine grained sandstone every way suitable for building, and in fact very similar to the material of which the northern side of the City Hall in New York is built; and in the vicinity of Germanton, near the former residence of Mr. Ruffin, a hill occurs whose contents are of the same kind, including a variety similar to the Nova Scotia grindstones, which article might, I think, be manufactured from this formation, of better quality than from any other locality in the State. A very fine close grain containing minute particles of isinglass, a light colour with a tinge of yellow or blue, are indications of a good quality for grindstones or whetstones.

A bed of pit-coal occurs only two or three hundred yards from the northern bank of Dan River, three miles by land below the Eagle Falls. It is seen on the side of a hill that faces the east, dipping to the northwest at an angle of about 20 degrees, and is so situated as to afford the greatest facilities for mining. As to the quality of the coal, it is the kind which is free from bituminous matter and which burns without flame; but the Professor's observations were too limited, and the specimens that he was able to obtain were too imperfect, to enable him to speak with confidence respecting its value. Veins of coaly matter resembling lamp-black are met with still farther south, not far from Germanton, and the black slate rocks of the whole district are impregnated in a greater or less degree with the same. But a more singular substance, which had been mistaken by the inhabitants for coal, is found at Col. Winston's, 2 miles east of Germanton. It consists of the remains of trees, sometimes lying scattered loosely over the ground in small billetts, and sometimes presenting to the view entire trunks, obeying the general direction and inclination of the rocky strata, affording another example of a subterranean forest similar to that found on the River Neuse, and before described under the name of Lignite. These fragments and trunks of fossil wood appear in the road for the distance of a mile and a half east of Germanton, reaching to the foot of the hill on which that town is built, that is, to the very extremity of the Transition formation itself. The fragments that are scattered over the surface are frequently so much altered by exposure, that they resemble common petrified wood; but those specimens which are taken fresh from their bed, are invested with bark perfectly reduced to coal, and of a shining black colour. The ligneous structure is less apparent in the mass. In a blacksmith's forge they burn with a yellowish flame, slightly tinged with green, emitting the odour of gunpowder, and finally melt into a yellowish black glass.

The best view of the lignite is in the bed of a small river, near a saw mill, where entire and very perfect trunks of trees are seen between the open layers of a coarse fragmented rock very much resembling granite. These trunks lie parallel with each other, and appear between the rocks formed, as though by compression, into flattened cylinders or ellipsoids, the diameters of the elliptical bases or ends being respectively 24 and 9 inches. The ends of large trunks exhibiting the same oval shape frequently project out of the banks. Here the formation terminates on the south, resting against a hill of mica slate, the strata of which and the transition rocks, dip in opposite directions, resting against each other and forming a roof.

LATEST FROM COLOMBIA.

Baltimore, October 11.

By the fast sailing schooner Abarilla, Captain Edwards, in fourteen days from Laguira, we have received letters to the 25th of September. The reports in circulation at Caraccas, as mentioned by the last arrival from Colombia, respecting the flight of General Bermudez, and the arrival of Bolivar at Bogota, are now ascertained to be incorrect. Our correspondents in Laguira having neglected to put any papers on board the Abarilla for us, we have to make use exclusively of our private advices for information regarding the state of parties in Venezuela, which, from present appearances, is rapidly approaching a very important crisis. We have nothing to hope from the moderation or prudence of General Paez, and as the expectation of Bolivar's immediate arrival in the country seems to be much allayed, it is highly probable that some unfortunate act of rashness will bring the battalion under the command of Marcero into immediate contact with the troops of the Reformers, when a civil war, it is to be apprehended, will desolate the fairest portion of the Republic. The large amount of American property which would be jeopardised under such circumstances, we should think ought to produce attention to the subject on the part of our Government, and the presence of one of our ships of war at Laguira, could not fail to prevent any improper conduct towards our citizens during the prevalence of any popular commotion.

Ireland.—The sufferings of the people of Ireland must be great indeed. The Kilkenny Independent says—"Thousands of wretches, whom one with very little effort of the imagination might mistake for resuscitated skeletons, are to be seen from morning until night, seated on the flags of our public streets, gazing on each other with that vacant and desponding look which bespeaks the extinction of almost every hope."

The Statutes of England occupy 45,000 close quarto pages, and the reports of common law decisions continually referred to, are contained in no less than 55,000 other pages. So that the evidential books of legal authority consist of about 100,000 pages. These books are of course exclusive of the different abridgments and treatises of law, and arguments and comments on legal decisions. Of these, Vesey's, Comyns', and Bacon's works contain a quantity of type equal to 200,000 common octavo pages!

The exertions made by the London Editors to obtain priority of intelligence, are truly remarkable, and they are liberally compensated by the public. The following deserves to be added to the instances already on record:—A copious report of the arguments on the motion of postponing the trial of Mr. W. Wakefield, at Lancaster, which concluded at half past 6 o'clock on Monday evening the 14th August, appeared in the London Morning papers of the Wednesday following, having reached London, by the Liverpool mail, on Tuesday night at 10 o'clock. To effect this, the Reporters posted to Warrington, a distance of 54 miles, in order to catch the Liverpool mail, which passes through Warrington at 12 o'clock, and taking lanterns in the chaises, actually transcribed their notes during the journey! The proceedings in the Crown Court, on Monday, when the flight of Mr. W. Wakefield was discovered, were transmitted by a post chaise express to London, and appeared in the Courier (exclusively) on Tuesday evening! The intelligence reached Chester from London on Wednesday evening at 6 o' clock, having thus travelled a distance of 421 miles in 56 hours.

Character of Dr. Parr, by himself.—"From my youth upward to the present moment I never deserted a private friend, nor violated a public principle—I have been the slave of no patron, and the drudge of no party—I formed my political opinions without the smallest regard, and have acted upon them with an utter disregard, to personal emoluments and professional honours—for many and the best years of my existence, I endured very irksome toil, and 'suffered' very trying 'need;'—measuring my resources by my wants, I now so 'abound' as to unite a competent income with an independent spirit,—and, above all, looking back to this life and onward to another, I possess that inward peace of mind, which the world can neither give nor take away.'"

The renowned Peter the Great, being at Westminster Hall in term time, and seeing a multitude of people swarming about the Courts of Law, is reported to have asked some one about him, 'What all those people were about?' and being answered, 'they are lawyers:' 'Lawyers!' returned he, with great vivacity, 'Why I have but four in my whole kingdom, and I design to hang two of them as soon as I get home.'

Manufactures.—It is estimated that the Cotton Goods manufactured in New England, annually, amount to 50,000 bales or twenty-five millions of yards. Within one hundred miles of Boston there are made annually fifteen thousand pieces of Flannels, besides an immense quantity of Satinets, Cassimeres and Negro Cloths.

Drunkenness.—The Newport Spectator in referring to Mr. Louiseau's curing Drunkards, says, "We know a man in this county who is periodically cured by his wife, as often as about once in six weeks. When the fits come on, she puts an emetic into his dram, which effects a cure for the time; and in order to remove temptation out of his way, she drinks up the rum herself."

TO THE EDITORS OF THE KENTUCKY ARGUS.

Gentlemen.—The following letter was written in reply to a letter from a gentleman of this State, requesting General Jackson to visit Kentucky, for the purpose of counteracting the intrigue and management of certain prominent individuals against him. You will please to insert it in the Argus, and oblige

Yours, &c.

Hermitage, July 31, 1826.

My dear Sir—Your favor of the 21st inst. is received, reassuring me of the wish of many of my friends in Kentucky that I should visit the Harrodsburg Springs. I had spoken early in the spring of this visit, because those waters had been recommended as necessary to the restoration of Mrs. J's health, and there was additional gratification derived from the hope that I would see many of my old friends in Kentucky, whose company at all times would be pleasing to me. But inasmuch as Mrs. J. is lately so far improved as not to render this trip necessary, it seems to me very questionable whether, without this necessity, I ought to yield to the other considerations, at this juncture. I know that so far as Kentucky is concerned, the unjust imputations which it is my wish to avoid, would never be raised; or rather, that a great proportion of her citizens would attribute to their proper origin, the objects of my visit; yet, when I reflect upon the management and intrigue which are operating abroad, the magnitude of the principles which they are endeavoring to supplant, and the many means which they can draw to their assistance from the patronage of the government, I feel it is not less due to myself and to principle, than to the American people, particularly so far as they have sanctioned my political creed, to steer clear of every conduct out of which the idea might arise that I was manœuvering for my own aggrandizement. If it be true, that the administration have gone into power contrary to the voice of the nation, and are now expecting, by means of this power, thus acquired, to mould the public will into an acquiescence with their authority, then is the issue fairly made out—shall the government or the people rule? and it becomes the man whom the people shall indicate as their rightful representative in this solemn issue, so to have acquitted himself, that while he displaces these enemies of liberty, there will be nothing in his example to operate against the strength and durability of the government.

With this candid expression of my feelings on this subject, I hope you will recognize nothing inconsistent with the claims which my friends in Kentucky have upon me. Were I unconnected with the present contest, you may rest assured that wherever my presence or my labor would be useful in arresting the efforts of intrigue and management, I should not hesitate to repair to the post which my friends might indicate as the most exposed. It is a source of much regret to disappoint your wishes, and others our mutual friends in Kentucky, but as things are, unless Mrs. J's health should render it necessary, I think you will coincide with me, that a visit to Kentucky would be improper at this period. I shall be happy to hear from you on the receipt of this.

Hastily your friend,

ANDREW JACKSON.

MR. CLAY AND GEN. JACKSON.

In reply to the charges and insinuations of the U. S. Telegraph, (published in our last,) the National Journal makes the following counter statement:

"We are authorized to deny, in the most unreserved and emphatic manner, that "Mr. Clay more than once called on General Jackson, in person, introduced the subject of the election, and said that he entertained no doubt that he (Gen. Jackson) would be the choice of the House." Mr. Clay made no visit to General Jackson, except to return the General's call of ceremony during the session of 1824—25. And we are authorized, in like manner, to deny that any overture was ever made, direct or indirect, upon the authority, express or implied, of Mr. Clay, "on his behalf," either to two members of Congress, or to General Jackson, not to appoint Mr. Adams, to appoint any other person Secretary of State. And we have no doubt, if Mr. Duff Green would name the persons who, he says, made the alleged overture, an equally positive contradiction of the allegation would be made by them. It follows, that, as there was no such overture, there could have been no rejection of it, and consequently no merit in the rejection. Mr. Green says, "this statement is not made on idle rumour. It is vouched for by men whose veracity I cannot doubt, and whom the nation will believe." We join with the Editors of the Enquirer in calling for the proofs. Let the statements or testimony of these men of veracity be presented to the public. Mr. Clay, far from any apprehensions of the truth, has, again and again, fearlessly solicited the fullest and freest investigation. That he had, prior to his departure from Kentucky in the fall of 1824, made up his mind to vote against General Jackson, in the contingency which happened, is proved by the letter of Dr. Drake; and, if necessary, would, we have no doubt, be further established by the other gentlemen to whom, in his circular to his constituents, he refers for the fact."

Milledgeville, October 3.

In some sections of our State the crops of corn are good—but in particular neighborhoods the production will fall short of the consumption. Something like an average crop of Cotton will perhaps be made. The price is truly discouraging, but nothing better can be expected while the embarrassments of the mercantile manufacturing classes of Great Britain continue.—Recorder.

Petersburg, Oct. 13.

Storm and Freshet.—After some days of cool but pleasant weather, early on Wednesday it commenced raining, accompanied by a strong N. E. wind, which continued the whole day, and until day-break on Thursday morning. During Wednesday night the wind came with the violence of a hurricane, and the rain poured down in torrents. Such a storm we have not experienced in several years. In consequence of the sudden flood, the River Appomattox and its numerous tributary streams, have risen considerably beyond their banks, and much damage has been done in this place and neighborhood by the overflowing of the waters. Among other accidents, we are informed that the Aqueduct Bridge belonging to the Upper Appomattox Canal Company, not far from the Corporation line west, has been washed away, which for a time will not only obstruct all commerce through that chanel, but prove a serious interruption to the Mills depending upon the Canal for a supply of water. On the River, the Mill Dam of Messrs. Jas. B. Kendall & Co. has been partially broken, though the extent of damage is not certainly known. On the Wharves, the lower stories of nearly all the Lumber-Houses are filled with water, and as they generally contain such articles as Sugar, Lime, etc. etc., the loss must be considerable. On Brick House Run, which crosses Bank and Old Sts., several buildings have been injured, and the walls, &c., in different places washed down. Perhaps in our next paper, we shall be enabled to give further particulars.—Int.

First written Constitution.—To South Carolina and not to Virginia is due the credit of the first constitution of government framed and adopted in the U. States. The N. A. Review states on authority of the journals, that on the 11th Feb., 1776, a committee was appointed to procure a plan or form of government, as had been recommended by the continental Congress, who a few days after reported a constitution, which was adopted by the provincial Congress of South Carolina on the 26th March, 1776, more than two months before that of Virginia. Wm. Henry Drayton was president of the S. C. Congress, and Charles C. Pinckney, chairman of the committee that reported the constitution as drafted.

From the Nantucket Enquirer.

A Noble Deed.—Admiral Sir Isaac Coffin's recent visit to this place, was for the purpose of consulting with his family connexions, upon a plan which he had long contemplated, of establishing and supporting a School upon the Lancasterian system. This institution is designed for the education of the youthful descendants, of whatever name, of Tristram Coffin, Sir Isaac's ancestor, who emigrated from England in 1644, first settled at Salisbury, near Newburyport, and in 1661, removed to Nantucket, and here spent the remainder of his days. It is understood that the Admiral is about to appropriate a sufficient fund for this purpose; and has appointed a board of six Trustees, all bearing the name of Coffin, who are to manage this fund, and superintend the school. The business is now progressing; a contract having already been made for a commodious School House, 30 by 68 feet, completely fitted for a Monitorial School, with suitable yard room, &c. The building is two stories in height, and capable of accommodating, in the two departments, two hundred and fifty male, and as many female scholars. In another year, the school will probably be organized, and in full operation.

Noble.—The Boston Palladium says, the Marblehead Light Infantry, Lt. Avery, visited Salem, on a late excursion. While partaking of a collation they heard that Mr. Benjamin Berry, of Andover, a revolutionary veteran, was incarcerated for a debt of $22. They immediately contributed the sum, liberated him, and brought him to their table.

It is said that Mr. Hume, on the opening of Parliament, means to move for a return of all the questions in which Ministers have changed their opinions. It will be a long and heavy document. [If some one would make a similar motion in our next Congress, we think something curious would be the result, that is to say, if the motion prevailed. There may be changes of opinion even among Editors.]

A Sketch.—We witnessed a spectacle last week, which we cannot refrain presenting to our readers. It may be the means of exciting reflection, if not effort. There came along the street a lean, dirty, haggard horse, with scarce substance enough to make a shadow. He was fastened by twine and rags and leather, to an old horsecart, that looked as if it was blown together by the wind. In the cart was a man, apparently about 50 years old, ragged, lame and blind, attended by his son, about 14. The son alighted, took a stone quart jug from the cart, and assisted his father to get out. The father took the son's arm, and thus they passed from store to store, inquiring for Rum! On the sightless eyeballs of this premature old man—on his trembling limbs—on his tattered garments—on his cart and horse and harness—and worst of all, on the boy—the son that led him—was written Rum! He was made blind by intemperance.

Laziness and Stubbornness.—A woman named Lucy Allen, at Martha's Vineyard, went to bed at the age of 16 years, and has actually lain in bed for thirty-two years. She was at first a little indisposed, but ever since has enjoyed good health, and all her faculties. When her bed is to be made, she rolls into another alongside. A few shocks of electricity, or galvanism, would set her limbs in motion.—Noah's Enquirer.

The Visiters of the University of Virginia held their regular autumnal meeting at Charlottesville on the 2d instant. Among the distinguished gentlemen present, who formed the Board, were Mr. Madison and Mr. Monroe—the first of whom was appointed Rector. Mr. Jefferson was Rector at the time of his death. It is delightful thus to see those who have attained ambition's height, re-descend with pleasure to the level of civil life, and actively engage in its interests and its duties. For this glorious example, we are even more indebted to our Ex-Presidents than for the fidelity with which they discharged their high political trusts.—Nat. Int.

Boston, October 7.

We learn that the President of the United States, who, with his lady, has resided a few days at the Exchange Coffee House, leaves town this day for the seat of his relative Ward Nicholas Boylston, Esq. at Princeton; that he will remain there till Tuesday, and be present at the Agricultural Exhibitions of the Heart of the Commonwealth on Wednesday, and immediately after proceed on his way to the seat of Government.

Indian Affairs.—The last Milledgeville Statesman and Patriot mention that the sectional surveyors sent out by Gov. Troup, had returned to Milledgeville, in consequence of the opposition by the Indians to the survey. One of the papers also states, that the Governor had requested the surveyors to remain in Milledgeville for three days, in which time he would raise a military force sufficient to protect them. We received private letters from Milledgeville, by Saturday night's mail, which make no mention of this subject: It is probable in a few days we shall have further advices relative to this business.

Louis McLane, the able representative of Delaware in Congress, has been re-elected by a majority of more than six hundred votes over A. Naudain.

At an adjourned town meeting at Philadelphia, on Monday afternoon, the uproar was so great, and the violence of parties such, that the respectable Chairman, William Jones, Esq., was put out of the chair by force. If these things be done in the green tree, what may we not expect in the dry?—Nat. Int.

The late Town Meeting in Philadelphia must have been uncommonly tumultuous and disorderly. The Editor of the Democratic Press states, that "a gentleman of good reputation, and himself a Jackson man, put himself forward to maintain order and support the Chair—he was forthwith assaulted and beat by at least half a dozen men of his own party, and to their eternal dishonor and disgrace be it here recorded, as they have recorded it in black and white on the arms of their friends, they bit him—BIT HIM WITH THEIR TEETH—FEROCIOUSLY & FIERCELY BIT HIM!!!" On which Mr. Noah drily asks, whether Col. Binns "would have them bite with their noses." Such scenes are execrable.—Rich. Enq.

We have heard that several duels are in embryo, but, as yet, we have seen nothing of a more hostile character than a few "paper pellets of the brain," except, now and then, the muzzle of a pistol peeping from under a coat tail.

If we were not horribly afraid of gunpowder, the very smell of which discomposes our nerves to an alarming degree, we would say to those gentlemen who appear armed in the streets, as if they were in an enemy's camp, "better put up your weapons, and reserve them for the defence of your country in time of need, when you may use them with more honor than in street fights.—Whig & Banner.

A Duel prevented.—Information was received at the Police Office yesterday morning, at half past five o'clock, that a duel was on foot, between a Mr. S——, and a Mr. B——, and, unless prevented, would be fought early that morning at Hoboken. Mr. Justice Hopson was instantly on the alert, and repaired himself to one of the Jersey Ferries, and despatched some officers to the other. It was in season: for the officer had but just arrived at the Barclay street Ferry before the gentleman, against whom the complaint was made, (S——,) made his appearance at the Ferry House, and was of course politely taken into custody. He refused to give bail neither to shoot his antagonist, nor suffer himself to be shot, and was taken to prison, where he remained at the last advices. Information was soon afterwards received, that the other party, seconds, doctors, pistols, and all, were at the Ferry, and officers were sent to make them captives also. But, on learning the fate of the first principal, and believing that that can be no fighting—"where one side only gives the blows," they prudently "made themselves scarce.—N. Y. Com. Adv.

Warrenton, October 13.

For the information of those at a distance only, (those nearer to us, being well enough convinced of the fact) we state, that there never has perhaps, before, fallen in this vicinity, a more rapid and steady rain, for 24 hours, than did the present week.—It commenced about midnight on Tuesday and ceased about the same hour the following night. The effect has been, to break down several mill dams in this neighborhood, and caused considerable injury to the mill houses, already heard of; and further destruction may naturally be expected to have been done.—Reporter.

No Court was formed at Franklin the present week, owing to the absence of Judge Mangum, caused no doubt, by his continued indisposition. We learn verbally, what we regret to state—that he was, a few days since, extremely ill.—Ib.

Aeronautic.—Last evening about a quarter before 6 o'clock, Mr. Robertson left Castle Garden in a large balloon, with the young lady, who according to advertisements, was to accompany him in his excursion. The air was fortunately very calm at sun set, although the wind had been fresh during the day, so much so as to induce some to imagine the ascent would not be attempted. The throng of spectators was very great in Castle Garden; the promenade, galleries, &c. being crowded; and the battery was so thronged that it appeared almost filled with people. Several steam-boats waited in the bay to witness the exhibition.

The appearance of the balloon was very beautiful: four smaller ones being loosely suspended under it, which continually moved in the air, while the boat containing the adventurers hung below. It rose gracefully and rapidly, moved gradually westward over New Jersey, and after remaining apparently stationary for some moments, was lost to the sight in about half an hour, partly by distance and partly by the fading light.—D. Adver.

Mr. Robertson landed last evening at 7 o'clock, at Union, a village within 1½ miles of Elizabeth-town, where he left the lady, and again ascended. He rose much higher than before, and re-landed at Westfield, at a quarter past 8; and at 15 minutes after 1 o'clock, to-day, arrived safe at Castle Garden.

☞ We are requested to state, that a four day's Meeting will take place in the Methodist Episcopal Church in this town, on Thursday, the 16th instant. There will be preaching at candle-light on Wednesday preceding. Several of the Clergy are expected to be present.

POETRY.

SEA SONG.

Altered from Cunningham.

A wet sheet and a flowing sea,
A wind that follows fast,
And fills the white and rustling sail,
And bends the gallant mast!
And bends the gallant mast, my boys;
While, like the Eagle free,
Away the good ship flies and leaves
Our home upon the lee.

O for a soft and gentle wind,
I heard a fair one cry;
But give to me the swelling breeze,
And white waves heaving high!
And white waves heaving high, my lads,
The good ship tight and free;
The world of waters is our home,
And merry men are we.

There's tempest in yon horned moon,
And lightning in yon cloud;
And hark the music, mariners!
The wind is wakening loud.
The wind is wakening loud, my boys,
The lightning flashes free;
The hollow oak our palace is,
Our heritage the sea.

THE SAILOR'S SONG.

Who wakes? who wakes? Ye ho, boys!
The grey mist flies apace;
The tide comes soft and slow, boys,
And the bark rocks in her place.
Start! Start! merrily start!
Ye sat not late at the wine.
There's sorrow and strife in a rich man's life,
A seaman's life be mine!

'Tis fresh! 'tis fresh! the breeze boys,
Will tightly hold to-day;
All o'er the dark blue seas, boys,
The glad waves glitter and play.
Thed start! start! &c.

The sea-mew's loudly screaming,
The grampus toils amain;
Up! up! if now you're dreaming,
You'll wake, perhaps, in vain!
Start! start! &c.

Then merrily wake! Ye ho, boys!
Let rich men snore and sleep;
We've mirth they ne'er shall know, boys,
On the blue waves of the deep!
Start! start! &c.

H. Bradford & Co.,

HAVE a good assortment of Foreign and Domestic DRY GOODS, and receive additions from the Partner in New York by almost every arrival through the year.

We also keep an assortment of STRAW & LEGHORN BONNETS, Fur Hats, Cotton Cards, Window Glass, Banboxes and Shoes. We will sell as low as can be afforded, either at wholesale or retail.

WASHINGTON HOTEL,

COLUMBIA, S. CAROLINA.

DR. THOMAS BRIGGS respectfully informs his friends and the public, that he has taken his large brick building (recently occupied by A. G. Nagel.) Having the means, he is determined to furnish his house in a manner calculated to invite the attention of all lovers of good living and good order. The traveller as well as constant boarder will here meet with every comfort which a spacious and elegant building and the Charleston and Columbia markets can afford; and all the attention which politeness can dictate or the spirit of accommodation call for.

Columbia, S. C. Sept. 25, 1826. 87t10w.

$25 Reward.

RANAWAY from the Subscriber, on the 2d of January last, a bright mulatto man named ANTHONY, 23 years of age, 5 feet 6 or 8 inches high. He has the sign of a burn on his hand, which may easily be discovered by an examination. I expect he is making his way to some non-slave-holding State, probably Ohio. A horse was missing in the neighborhood about three weeks since, which I expect was stolen by said negro; the horse is a chesnut sorrel, 14 hands 1 inch high, with a blaze in his face, three of his feet white. The above reward will be given for his apprehension and delivery to me in Chatham county, 25 miles west of Pittsboro', or securing him in any jail so that I can get him; and all reasonable expenses paid. Ten dollars will be paid for the delivery of the horse alone.

Register of Debates.

In the press, and will be published before the next Meeting of Congress,

GALES & SEATON'S

Register of Debates in Congress.

VOL. II.

This volume will contain—

1. A full report of the principal Debates and Incidents of the Session of Congress which has just closed, chronologically arranged.

2. An Appendix, containing a complete List of the Members of the two Houses, with the President's Message to Congress, and other leading State Papers.

3. A complete Copy of the whole body of the Laws passed during the Session.

4. A copious Index to all the matters contained in the volume.

The volume for this year will contain double the matter of the volume of last year, but will be afforded to subscribers at the price of Five Dollars. The number of extra large Brevier pages which it will contain is expected to exceed a thousand.

We shall not undertake to magnify the importance of a work of this description. We are more than content with the verdict which public opinion has passed upon the first volume. We will only add, that the second volume shall excel the first, in typographical execution as well as arrangement; an entire new type having been procured expressly for it.

MANSION HOTEL,

FAYETTEVILLE, N. C.

THE Subscriber returns his sincere thanks to his friends and the public generally, for the liberal support he has heretofore received, and, in soliciting a continuance of those favors, assures them that every exertion will be used, and due attention bestowed, in order to the comfort and pleasure of Travellers and Boarders. His Rooms are numerous, being new, clean, and large, are well adapted for comfort and health, opening upon a garden which presents a fine prospect; superadded are the comforts of ease and retirement, which may be enjoyed in spacious Parlours by Travelling Families. This situation, being on one of the most elevated streets, is healthy; attended with the advantage and convenience arising from the important and extensive business transacted on that street, which will make it the interest of Country Merchants and Planters to call. It is constantly supplied, by means of aqueducts, with pure water, issuing from one of the best fountains in the State.

His BAR will be constantly supplied with the best and choicest of LIQUORS.

His TABLE with the best the country and market affords; his Stables shall be attended by faithful steady, and honest Ostlers. Other advantages are attendant upon this Establishment, rarely to be excelled in any other Public House in this State.

August 2.

Fayetteville Academy.

THE Examination of the students of this Institution will take place on the 3d inst., and the exercises recommence on the 5th July.

The Committee of superintendance have the satisfaction to state, that the prospects of this Institution are as flattering at this time, as they have been at any former period. The Rev. Mr. Hollister, a gentleman who bears the highest testimonials, both of his education and experience, has been engaged as the Principal of this Academy. He will take charge of the Classical Department, as well as exercise a general control over the Institution. He will be assisted by Mr. GAY in the Male, and Mrs. with some excellent qualifications the Committee have had an opportunity of becoming acquainted, together with such other Tutors in the English Department, as may be found necessary. The Female Department will be under the direction of Mrs. Hollister, and will no doubt, be found to be one of the best Schools for young Ladies in the Southern States.

The advantage of having an Institution of this kind, where the manners are to be formed as well as the intellect improved, under the influence and example of a respectable and well regulated community; the uniform healthiness of this town, for several years past, and the peculiarly comfortable apartments, erected at considerable expense for the accommodation of the School, with the cheapness of tuition and board, altogether, warrant the Committee in recommending the Institution to the notice of the public, particularly to those of the low country. The central situation of Fayetteville, and the facilities furnished by the mails, affording opportunities of correspondence, almost every day in the year, with all parts of the country, is a consideration which will not be lightly esteemed by parents who may be under the necessity of sending their children abroad for their education. Boarding can be had in many of the respectable families in town, at a moderate price.

It may be well, likewise to state, that the conduct of youth sent to this Institution, particularly those from abroad, will be carefully observed, as well out of the School as within it, and a proper degree of attention will be paid to their habits, manners and morals, as well as their scholastic education.

JOHN MACRAE,
Secretary of the School Committee.
